“The Sultry Saloon concept came to me nearly immediately after leaving Joe and Bronwyn’s new home. Sultry emerged as the defining adjective and goal as Joe’s predilection for patina came across as soon as I saw his antique terra-cotta kilim.

As a young, laid-back and low profile couple with back-and-forth kids, the overarching goal was to make their hangout cool enough for their peers and resistant enough for children. Wild Wild West swagger starts at the hand hewn oak floors and needs to rise together with the furniture.

John Wayne’s twang meets Mae West’s talk right from the entryway: pine trees in mist, saddle stitched chairs and log side-table invite the clients to their cozy getaway as soon as they set foot in their home.

Joe and Bronwyn are unafraid of unique collectible pieces and so I sourced one of a kind vintage lights rich in colour and character.

A round table would tether down the ensuite of rooms as the dining room straddles between kitchen and living room. The kitchen counter should be a talking piece and leather and wood will be introduced to break up the monotony of the white cabinets that wrap these rooms.

The living room should offer up a sofa sized properly as well as an accent chair. The African turned wood pebbles bring the organic outdoorsy feel. In this home it is important to be able to kick up one’s feet at the end of the day.

To boot, Whitney Lewis Smith’s art offers up mystery and depth besides echoing Joe’s taste of the photographic medium.

Sultry Saloon should be as earthy, rich, and broken in as Lucky Luke’s saddle.”

Giddyup!
