ZEN CHATELAINE

Concept by Henrietta Southam

The concept of Zen Chatelaine emerged from a first presentation where HS Design took a distinctively more haute couture approach mixed with geometric forms to express what she believed would fit the home and mandate. It took the expression of one concept for the clients to comprehensively express the direction they preferred which was a more “natural modern” to the “italian style” in the moodboards.

In order to shift from one concept to the other, the materials changed. Out were the Kelly Wearstler illusion palatial tiles and in came pebbles and teak, cord and cement. The colors were warmed up to reflect an earthier palette: greys were exchanged for terracotta and cream alabaster, and the hardware finish was switched from gleaming brass to a muted venetian bronze. Vanity shapes were modernized and unnecessary sconces removed so as to create calmer, more soothing, Zen-like spaces.

Even though the clients only asked for a redraw of 2 out of 4 bathrooms, the powder room being the favorite, HS Design decided to match the basement bathroom to the mood of the other three in color and texture. A homogeneous approach was key to a completed package.
