The minimal but warm aesthetic that is the focus of Greely Glam was inspired by the client’s wish for streamlined simplicity, a love of grey and black, but with a compromise of warm toned onyx tiles and oak floors throughout.

The magnificent temple-size volumes inspired sweeping vistas that needed to be brought down in scale with a modern sleek lighting package that would add drama while keeping all theatrical flourishes at bay.

The language offered is both primitive with an opulent choice of stone slabs and wood surfaces, as well as decidedly futuristic in the sparseness achieved with a tailored package.

This said, Greely Glam is a home for a family of five. With the colors and choices of materials at hand Henrietta wove in touches of amber, paper, leather and wool, to soften the linear edges and dampen the echoing sounds a less inviting furniture palette would bring.

From the detailed electrical planning, to carving spaces of surprise and sumptuousness, HS Design wished to elevate the client’s dream house to that of a jaw dropper while making it as inviting as possible to the client’s large and boisterous family.

Why don't people leave off being lovable
Or thinking they are lovable, or wanting to be lovable,
And be a bit elemental instead?

Since man is made up of the elements
Fire, and rain, and air, and live loam
And none of these is lovable
But elemental,
Man is lop-sided on the side of the angels.
